HOUSE IS DROWNED

A house was destroyed by the flood, and the family was rescued.

The Health Committee returned a rather mild report on the Board of Health resolution refusing to allow Waikiki to go to Molokai. It characterized the action as unfair and not in keeping with the spirit of moderation that marked the action of the House. It looks, the committee said, as if the doctors were animated by jealousy, and although unable to cure leprosy themselves, were afraid to let anybody else attempt it. The report was adopted.

On being called to order again, the House took up on third reading H. B. 244, allowing a homesteader to live on a piece of land adjacent to that which he is homesteading. The bill passed.

H. B. 215, making special appropriations from the Loan Fund, was and S. B. 9 was deferred until Tuesday.

THE DAM MATTER

The dam matter was taken up and Kalelopu moved that the majority report be adopted. He said he much regretted that the report was not considered yesterday before the appropriation for the dam was passed. He thought the recommendations that the contract be cancelled, that the work be placed in the hands of a competent engineer, and that the contractor be placed under heavy bonds should have been considered before the appropriation passed, but now it was useless to talk, and he regretted that the matter was being considered. He could see no real good to be derived from argument. It would only afford some members an opportunity to go after some officials of the Government.

Sheldon conceded that it would do no good to kick at this time.

Pull moved the previous question. Quinn objected, saying the question was an important one, and anybody who wanted to talk on it ought to be allowed to do so.

Pull couldn't see any use in trying to shoot at the place where a bird had once perched, after the bird had flown.

Rawlins argued at length on his statement that the contract could not be cancelled.

"I don't believe for one minute," he said, "that the Government can cancel this contract without a fight."

Rice for the Committee said that they felt that if the work on the dam were to go along in the way it is dragging along now, something must be done.

"It is better to stop now," said Rice, "than to go on as we are. That is the reason we felt that a new Loan Bill should be put in. If they were allowed to go on with the present Loan Bill, the work would go on under the present contract."

LEAD LIKE BLIND MONKEYS

"We have been led like blind monkeys and pulled by the ears, so far as this report was concerned," said Pull. "The thing was right in front of us and we couldn't see it. We went to work yesterday and appropriated $132,000 for the dam, and now we are saying the money can't be spent without the cancellation of the contract and that the contract can't be cancelled. It's strange how wise we get over night. There is only one thing we can do. I move that we call for the return to the House of the Appropriation Bill, so we can reconsider it with this report."

Kalelopu moved that both the majority and the minority report be tabled.

RAWLINS' LEGAL EYE

Hughes got his chance to talk at last. He said that he had not heard one argument why the report of the committee should be tabled.

"Is there a man who does not know the intolerable condition of affairs that exists at the Nuuanu dam; is there a man who does not know that the people's money has been wasted? The dam represents a waste of money; it represents a want of confidence, but it does not represent any one thing that is in the interests of the people."

"The Nuuanu dam is like an illegal female child—it has on it the bar sinister. It was conceived in haste; it was born in arrogance."

The motion to table the reports was lost.

The motion to reconsider the action on the Appropriation Bill was lost.

Pull moved to defer further consideration until Monday. He said there might be a sprinkle of rain over night that would start a crop of new ideas in the heads of the members.

LIQUOR BILL REPORT

Rawlins presented the report of the Conference Committee on Senate Bill 91, the Liquor Bill, which was adopted.

M'CLELLAN WRITES

Mr. Thomas, Mr. Minor, and Mr. Norris of that committee. The two former have declined, but I am glad to say that Mr. Norris will come.

Owing to the declination of the California Senators, we invited some other Western Senators, as shown by the list, but none of them were able to accept. The entire Rivers and Harbors Committee was invited, but only six members will be able to join the party.

To replace some other declinations, we have invited Messrs. Boutell, Underwood, and Needham, of the Ways and Means Committee, but none of them has answered as yet. Other declinations have also made it possible to invite Mr. Stevens, who is on taken up on third reading. This bill carries $135,117.96. Passed unanimously.

H. B. 197, Quinn's mongoose bill, came back from the Senate with amendments. The House concurred.

SECOND READING
The Senate Bill authorizing the Maui County bonds in the sum of $110,000, went through on second reading.

VETOES SUSTAINED
The Governor's veto of H. B. 139, relating to hunting with firearms, was taken up. Correa, the introducer of the bill, moved that the veto be sustained, as the Governor had pointed out defects in the bill, the Senate had voted to sustain, and another bill on the same subject had already passed the House. The veto was sustained.

The same action was taken regarding the veto of S. B. 76, requiring any person to get the consent of the Supervisors before digging up a public street or road.
